The Biennial Ruth Borchard Self-Portrait Prize 2019 is open to all artists – not just portraitists – who live, work or have studied in the United Kingdom and Ireland.

From the initial entries, 120 artists will be selected for the exhibition at Piano Nobile Kings Place.

At the opening of the exhibition, £10,000 will be awarded to the winner by a panel of prestigious judges including, Sean Rainbird

(Director of the National Gallery of Ireland), Professor Deborah Swallow (Director of the Courtauld Institute of Art), Air Chief Marshal Sir Stephen Hillier (Head of the RAF), Martin Gayford (Art Critic and Writer), Marc Steene (Director of Outside In) and 2017 prize winner, Benjamin Ogbemor.

Alongside the winning self-portrait, a number of works from the submissions will be purchased for the Ruth Borchard Next Generation Collection.

The Prize represents the very best in contemporary practice and encourages all artists to focus on self-portraiture. To help spread these values, in 2019 the Prize will be partnered with the Courtauld Institute of Art and the arts charity Outside In.
